

Endorsement of Commercial Products

Paediatricians should in no way endorse commercial products whether they are pharmaceuticals, nutritional products, equipment items or any other products. Any support for a product produced by a commercial company should be based on evidence obtained from clinical trials. Where support is given to such a product, it should be given for the generic version of the product rather for a particular brand name.

IPA Ethics Committee
March 2009